Meatch, Howard Gill, one of the most brilliant aviators of the Wright school, was dashed to the ground yesterday afternoon at the Cicero flying field, at Chicago, and was so terribly crushed that he died on the way to the St. Anthony de Padua Hospital.

With marvelously quick wit, Meatch depressed the head of his machine, and, though he crashed to the ground a second or two later than Gill, he escaped with several severe cuts and bruises on the face and head, suffering more from the shock than his bodily injuries. Meatch was taken to the same hospital.
